

Threat Assessment Team Training

In-Person or Livestreaming

- ⇒ With every targeted violence occurrence there were always signs recognized by others prior to the event.
- ⇒ Someone knew about the threat of violence and most of the time they reported it to someone else.
- ⇒ Various agencies receiving reports have a difficult time “connecting those dots” and using those reports in a meaningful way.
- ⇒ Every district has less formal or less comprehensive processes currently in place that need to be recognized and incorporated without duplication of efforts.

*Lt. Dave Okada of the Salem Oregon Police Department, a contributing author of the book Assessing Student Threats, will discuss the basic concepts of a threat assessment program and how to implement a threat assessment school district team that follows the recommendations of the Safe Schools Initiative and the prescriptive outline provided by the FBI.*
